"But in a finish fight, he knows it as well as everybody else that he would have absolutely no change. JIM JEFFHIES."

Champion Jim Jeffries assertions to a friend in Columbus, O., are to be wondered at, for the champion has time and time again said since he met the exchangion at Coney Island and beat him in twenty-three rounds, that if he ever met him again he would beat him in a punch, with the expiration of the champion's contract with Brady, the former will attend to his own business.

Jeffries's disgrunted state is due to Brady having consented to match him in a six-round bout with Corbett in Chicago, some time ago. Brady had more confidence in his champion than the latter evidently had in himself. Jeffries saw that if he met Corbett his reputation would be seriously impaired, for he felt that he could not put away his enemy in the "punch" after all.

Jeffries says he has other grievances against Brady, but they are of a business nature.
